

The Status Quo

© 2019 Will Stanley

I've always wondered where the world came from
How everything comes from one
And I'd like to know just where love begins
And is loving love too much a sin
If curiosity killed the cat
Tell me what transpires after that
After the brain goes flat
It seems my head is full of things I'd like to know
Things that science cannot show
And so
I'll just accept the status quo

Little children ask why the grass is green
And why some people are so mean
They question everything they don't quite get
It's the scientific mindset
As we seek the answer to all we see
Let's remember that we're lucky just to be
And keep on clambering to make our knowledge grow
And not just go with the flow
And so
Not just accept the status quo.

Some things seem tried and true
But are riddled with falsehoods through and through

One thing for sure is I love you
And my analysis says you love me too
So let's not question where this all will go
Let's just enjoy the show as we go
Let's keep on going, let's keep on flowing and so
Just accept the status quo
